The Closing Trump Administration and the Transformation of the Islamic World:
The Assad Regime's Discourse on Islam

SUZUKI Norio*

This paper explores to organize the reconstruction model of the world system after the Corona disaster proposed by Professor Kinhide Mushakoji in the form of the "M-model." In this case, this paper investigates, on the one hand, the nature of the Trump administration's Middle East policy and what it has been trying to close with its consequences, and on the other hand, it analyzes how the Assad regime in Syria perceives Islam.
